OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY

WASHINGTON, D.C. 20220

June 15, 1982

DCI/IC 5524-82

A+B-2
LOGGED

25X1

MEMORANDUM FOR: [REDACTED]

Director
Intelligence Community Staff

18 JUN 1982

FROM: J. Foster Collins
J. Foster Collins, Special Assistant to the Secretary (National Security)SUBJECT: Budget Forecast 1984-1988
Department of the Treasury
Office of Intelligence Support

The Office of Intelligence Support (OIS) constitutes the only Treasury Expenditure Center/Target Decision Unit in the NFIP. The activities and functions of OIS are considered General Support (Management/Headquarters). The focus of the OIS Program is to ensure that the Secretary of the Treasury and other Treasury officials receive timely and relevant intelligence support from the Intelligence Community (IC) and that Treasury requirements, information and expertise are made available to the IC. (U)

Progress in carrying out the program has been significant this past year. IC support for Treasury in dealing with Japanese trade problems, the economic dimensions of the Polish and Falkland Islands crises, and with shifting attitudes on Global Negotiations and the international monetary institutions has been particularly helpful. In carrying out specific program guidance, progress has varied.

A. In the general support category of increased and expanded support to Treasury Bureaus dealing with terrorism and illegal technology transfers, results have been excellent. The U.S. Secret Service, representing the Treasury, has worked with the Critical Intelligence Problems Committee and in other fora to better shape terrorism requirements and product. The U.S. Customs Service has assigned a Customs officer to the staff of the Technology Transfer Intelligence Committee and worked closely to better link intelligence collection to the enforcement process to prevent the illegal transfer of sensitive technology.

B. Concerning the guidance item on encouragement of Treasury's capability to expand its overt collection of economic intelligence through the financial attache system, major progress will probably only come if the possibility of IC funding, discussed below, materializes.

C. The secure voice communications upgrade is in train and new equipment should become generally available well before the 1986 goal. (S)

Approved Capabilities

Resources forecast for OIS are included in the attached tables. The forecast falls within the DCI Base Guideline, although funds for development of a modest automated storage and retrieval capability to function as an enhancement to the Treasury Automated Communications System have been broken out as an Ongoing Initiative. This effort has been in progress for several years and will not reach fully operational + 1 status until 1988. Considerable saving has been realized because software development is now within Treasury's own projected capability. We still hope that a centralized community bibliographic and document retrieval system will be developed to augment our modest effort. (C)

The arrival in April of a DCD Officer on non-reimbursable detail to perform the duties of a fourth National Intelligence Adviser has allowed OIS to rationalize its organization and better carry out all the functions encompassed in our mission. Such an augmentation would have been impossible under departmental budget constraints, and I remain convinced that any reduction of current strength, including the DCD Officer and the NSA Officer assigned at OIS, would result in slower response to departmental needs, lessen our capability to maintain desirable security control of sensitive intelligence information, and reduce our participation in IC efforts. (C)

New Initiatives

With the assignment of the DCD Officer and the realities of budget constraints, no new initiatives are contemplated. (U)

I want to take the opportunity afforded by this forecast to alert the IC of a possible change in funding source for OIS. The Deputy Secretary of the Treasury has discussed with the DDCI the possibility of OIS funding coming from an intelligence appropriation because of severe limitations on Treasury Departmental funding. We have just received the DDCI response concerning this option, and we are currently considering the limited possibilities. (U)
